

21st degrees of Scorpio: 'A soldier derelict in his duties

Is the soldier in this sentence just been indifferent to his duties or are his actions guided by his conscience? Read one way, the soldier may be disregarding his responsibilities and duties. Read another way, the soldier is instead standing up for what he feels is right. Having paid alliance to a higher order (his commandants, the army, the nation) he has now to uphold his principles even if they go against their authority. In either case he will have to accept the consequences of his decisions.
