

23 degree of Sagittarius: 'Immigrants entering a new country'

So much is implied in this simple sentence: a whole world of feelings, hopes, expectations, apprehension, longing, even sorrow.

A new life is beginning but everything about it is an unknown. The heart still aches for what has been left behind, family, friends, the comfort of belonging.

One has to learn new rules in the game of life, a new language perhaps and costumes. Would one fit in or instead feel for ever alienated and different as at this crucial time of passage?

Being in two hearts and minds, pulled by the powerful strings of the past, while already carried on the invisible wings of the future.
