

3 degree of Capricorn: ‘The human soul receptive to growth and understanding’

This is a different Sabian symbol, not because of any oddity, but because it isn't an image at all, rather an attempt at describing something as elusive as the workings of the human soul.

The soul evolves continually, even when there is no external proof that the individual is actually changing in any way. The soul within keeps on growing because its awareness is heightened by every little scrap of experience gathered in this world. This inner, often secret understanding accumulates with time, until the external person's ego becomes aware of the inward change and starts acting accordingly.

I feel that the soul's gift to gather the essence of every experience is what is implied here.
