

11 degree of Capricorn: 'Pheasants display their brilliant colours on a vast lawn'

This image reminds me of the grand estates once owned by noble families and enriched clergy, nowadays by wealthy magnates and movie stars. Everything appears perfect: the vast lawn, manicured and watered, the pheasants let to display their brilliant colours rather than being hunted down for food.

This image is the epitome of the aesthetic/hedonistic life, materially only obtainable by few privileged people, spiritually by anyone, artist, poet, mystic, tramp, shop assistant, self trained to conceive life in a non utilitarian way. These individuals can see perfection of form and find immense pleasure everywhere, because they know 'how' to look.
