

16 degree of Capricorn: 'Boys and girls in gymnasium suits'

This is an image of youthful exuberance (hence the need of physical exercises) tamed by strong social conditionings. A gymnasium is not an open field where boys and girls can roam freely to play at their own games, but rather a place of restraint and discipline. The very name gymnasium reminds one of traditions going back thousands of years. In such a place team work is encouraged rather than individual skills and prowess.

The detail that these children, irrespective of gender or personal taste, are all wearing the same suit, a school uniform and colours, indicates the need to conform, in this particular situation, because a more individualized approach could prove a danger to the group's interests and even survival.
