

20 degree of Sagittarius: 'People cutting through ice, for summer use'

An image of contrasts: the cold ice and the summer heat. Here the climate must be very cold and the ice very thick in order to keep for summer use. These conditions suggest a harsh, nearly sub-polar environment, where people have to be very resourceful and tough to survive.

The ice cutting is one of the survival skills born of the knowledge of the seasons and the environment the people live in. They carry out old age practices that have proven themselves very effective, handed down from generation to generation.

Ability to forecast and plan for forthcoming conditions; relying on what is good and solid from the past to build a better future.
