

13 degree of Aquarius: 'A barometer'

A barometer measures atmospheric pressure and temperature. From these measurements we can estimate, with a degree of accuracy, possible changes in the weather pattern.

The instrument puts a numerical value on phenomena that once were simply experienced and processed through the body. Our bodies in fact feel the low pressure mounting before a storm, while external heat will naturally raise our internal temperature.

So the barometer in this image is the embodiment of a technology superimposing itself on man's ability to read nature through, not only his five physical senses, but that superior instinct that provides him with insights into the mysteries of life.
