

14 degree of Aquarius: 'A train entering a tunnel'

If you never been on a train entering a tunnel you wouldn't know how sudden the change is, from light to dark, during a day time trip, or from relative to complete darkness, during a nocturnal trip. This effect is due, of course, to the train's great speed and the black, underground nature of the tunnel.

A similar change occurs again when the train exits the tunnel. In both instances, if unprepared, we could lose our bearing and become unable to see, in a way losing site of reality.

Entering a tunnel at full speed represents for me a sudden change of awareness, as when we are abruptly woken from a dream or deep sleep; it is an image of those occurrences in life when a prompt adjustment to new circumstances is required or we could otherwise be jolted out of consciousness, with unforeseeable results.
